

A Collaborative Project of Vancouver Island Literacy Network

Designed and printed by printshop@sd71.bc.ca

How to Skim Board

This is Noah. This is Liam.

They want to learn to skim board.

They need skim boards and a long, sandy beach.

Noah tries this spot. He needs shallow water and smooth sand.

Noah has the perfect spot to
skim board.

Liam is too deep.
He needs shallow water
to skim board.

Noah has the perfect spot to
skim board.
Noah runs and throws the skim
board just ahead of him.

Noah and Liam are tired.
Skim boarding is hard work!

Noah and Liam build a sand castle instead.

Victoria Clarke has kindly gifted these photos to our Vancouver Island book project. We are extremely grateful that she has shared her photographic talents with us.

Lisa Kinshella is a member of the Island Literacy Network. Her son, Liam is pictured with his good friend, Noah. We are thankful that these best friends have shared their friendship through these amazing photos.

Victoria Clarke has taken photographs since she was a young teenager, encouraged by her father's passion for photography and print making. Victoria's travels around the world to places such as Mongolia, Iceland and Bhutan, have provided rich subject matter for her photographs. Her photographic work is also informed by her painting through which she explores abstract expressionism with a range of mixed media. She lives in Victoria with her family, loves the outdoors and is a volunteer with a local search and rescue group.